

Join us in Nunavut

Dr. Katherine Canil loves working in Nunavut.

I came north twelve years ago for the professional challenge and personal adventure of being a solo surgeon in a remote Arctic hospital. I got plenty of both. It can be demanding but it is always interesting and meaningful work in a supportive, collegial environment. And no one has to maintain and run an office or do billing! Most importantly, Iqaluit is a great little community for my small children and despite my call commitments, there is enough flexibility to allow me to be a real presence in their lives and fully share with them the array of unique experiences living in the Arctic brings, while doing work I love.
